Steward Leadership Impact

Local Action, Global Growth

Doi Tung Development Project,
Mae Fah Luang District,
Chiang Rai Province, Thailand

The world is entering an era of radical transparency, accelerated by AI-driven technology, where every action taken by businesses, governments, and individuals is immediately visible and subject to judgment. Climate change, transformative technologies, increasing inequality, and shifting international power dynamics are reshaping both society and the global economy.

Traditional business models that focused solely on profit are failing. While they have generated wealth, they have also contributed to inequality, environmental degradation, and declining public trust. Although ESG (Environmental, Social, and Governance) frameworks have raised awareness, they come with heavy compliance requirements and are slow to deliver meaningful impact. Separately, while economic progress races ahead, global well-being stumbles.

A new leadership approach is necessary—one that rejects the false trade-off between sustainability and profitability. Businesses can achieve lasting financial success by addressing environmental and social challenges, essentially turning these needs into growth opportunities. Organisations that succeed by doing good gain trust, resilience, and a competitive edge.

This is Steward Leadership, which directs ambition toward win-win-win solutions for stakeholders, society, and the planet.

Experience it firsthand on a 5-day immersive journey to Doi Tung, featuring workshops and community engagement that demonstrate how steward leadership drives purpose, profit, and lasting impact.

About the Doi Tung Development Project (DTDP)

The Doi Tung Development Project, initiated by Mae Fah Luang Foundation, focuses on sustainable development in Chiang Rai, Thailand. It combats poverty, opium cultivation, and deforestation through eco-friendly agriculture, handicrafts, education, and healthcare. Empowering local communities, the project promotes self-reliance, preserves culture, and ensures environmental conservation for long-term prosperity.

About the Mae Fah Luang Foundation (MFLF)

Mae Fah Luang Foundation under Royal Patronage is a Thai non-profit organisation that works to create new opportunities for people to emerge from the vicious cycle of poverty, turn away from illicit livelihoods such as the cultivation of poppy for opium, and build new lives in harmony with their environment, by "helping the people to help themselves." The holistic and integrated area-based approach which puts the local community at the centre of its own development process, has resulted in significant improvement in the overall well-being of the community – economically, socially, and environmentally.

Participant Feedback

The quality of a programme hinges heavily on the quality of speakers and this programme exceeded my expectations.

I will commit myself to practice what the programme has taught. A long journey begins with a small step.

It is a great programme and practical to have observational study for a short time.

I will bring back a new concept of Steward Leadership and the spirit of a strong leader to my organisation and country.
